PAROLES GELÉES

THE BRANDED CITY

LA VILLE MARQUÉE

Ce serait le moment de philosopher et de rechercher si, par hasard, se trouvait ici l'endroit où de telles paroles dégèlent.

Each volume of Paroles gelées is the result of the hard work, dedication and support of various people and organizations. The editors would like to thank those who contributed to the success of the Annual UCLA Department of French and Francophone Studies Graduate Student Conference, in particular the presenters, moderators, and volunteers. In October of 2009, the graduate students of our department were honored to welcome speakers—both graduate students and professors—from other cities and countries to UCLA to engage in academic discussions of the theme “The Branded City / La ville marquée.” We would like to give special thanks to Marja Warehime as our keynote speaker, whose insightful address entitled “Belleville: Two Perspectives from Three Angles” prompted all conference participants to rethink the Parisian landscape, through her focus on the case of Belleville. Moreover, we would like to thank Marja Warehime, Peter Bloom, and Charles Tshimanga-Kashama for their participation in a round table discussion, entitled “The Branded City Today.” In keeping with the interdisciplinary focus of both the conference and our department, this round table discussion brought together professors from various institutions whose work spans time periods, geographic locations, and disciplines. This discussion challenged all present to reframe our thinking regarding the relationship between international cities, their inhabitants, history, and politics. Our gratitude goes to Andrea Loselle both for deftly moderating the round table discussion and for her generous support in the planning stages of the conference.

We would also like to express our special thanks to Dominic Thomas, Chair of the Department of French and Francophone Studies at UCLA, for his continued confidence in and commitment to the graduate students of our department, the graduate conference and Paroles gelées. Recognition and thanks are also due to Laura Clennon for her invaluable help and patience, and to Gina White and Olga Duka for their administrative assistance.

Furthermore, we would like to thank all those who submitted articles to this volume of Paroles gelées whose work explores the dynamic and varied relationships between Paris and its inhabitants. Finally, our deep appreciation and gratitude go to the UCLA Graduate Students Association for its constant dedication to graduate student research and whose contribution allows for the publication of this journal.
