Letter from the Editors

This volume marks the 25th publication of the UCLA Historical Journal. Since 1980, the Journal has served as a space for scholars and graduate students to publish their original research. As the discipline of History adapts to incorporate new technologies and develop new priorities and methodologies, the editors of the UCLA Historical Journal also intend to approach this publication's contribution to the literature of the field by considering these changes. The graduate students involved in this publication would not be able to continue this intellectual tradition of promoting excellence in research and writing—and thus serving as a resource for graduate students—without the continuing support of readers, the UCLA History Department, and those scholars who consider our journal for publication. For this reason, we thank the authors for their submissions. We also thank the UCLA History Department for its commitment to the Journal; it would not be possible without our Department Chair, David N. Myers, our Graduate Advisors, Eboni Shaw, Hadley Porter, and Deborah Dauda, and the Graduate Student Association Director of Publications, Stacey Meeker. We are confident that the articles in Volume 25 of the UCLA Historical Journal contribute to this tradition of historical scholarship and original research.
