GHETTO WOMAN

by

Syl Cheyney-Coker

Woman when I saw you I thought you were African as radiant in dyed blue boubou and head wrapped in silken cloth you drifted slowly in metallic grace to the rhythm of the wind

What are your roots woman Wollof, Ashanti, Hausa, Temne Jollof, Susu, Mandingo or Fulani where are your maternal shrines Dakar, Ghana, Mali, Jos Guinea, Gambia or Sierra Leone

American woman ghetto woman you are the soul woman and your music plays in the night of dance soul music, ghetto music, black music balangi music, conga music, tomtom music and tomtom dance you are the sweet answer of classical riddles and the lyric of your khalam glows in the night of your eyes you are the mask of Watts and the quintessence of the divine

Watts black Watts protect and hide her this dark gazelle eyes darker than night lest they cut her down never to rise again.

SYL CHEYNEY-COKER, Sierra Leonean journalist, was educated at the Prince of Wales School and later took a degree in Radio and Television Journalism at the University of Oregon. He has worked as a journalist for the Eugene Register Guard in Oregon, and his first book of poems is awaiting publication. His interests are African art and drumming.
