ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The editorial staff of the Black Law Journal would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge those whose efforts have significantly enhanced our journal. First, a sincere tribute from our staff goes to Mr. David Chaney, the outgoing Editor-in-Chief. Few subscribers and admirers of this publication realize the tremendous contribution and dedication put forth by Mr. Chaney. The Black Law Journal staff would like to take a moment to express our admiration for our colleague and former leader.

A word of thanks goes out to Linda Tiggs, Executive Director of the Black Law Journal. It is her overriding efforts that keep us together and moving in an effective manner.

Our sincere thanks go to the U.C.L.A. Center for Afro-American Studies. It is through their financial and moral support that the Black Law Journal is a reality. Despite the fact that we are a special interest publication, the Center has provided unwavering support for our efforts to present to the legal community in general and the Black community in particular an outstanding Black legal publication.

Special thanks are offered to Dr. Claudia Mitchell-Kernan, the Acting Director of the Center for Afro-American Studies.

Last, but certainly not least, we would like to commend the entire staff of the Black Law Journal. It goes without saying that it is the unselfish efforts of the students that make this publication possible.
