FOREWORD

Since its constitution over twenty years ago, the UCLA Women's Law Journal has steadfastly sought to provide a space for legal scholarship concerned with the gendered aspects of the law. We continue to publish groundbreaking scholarship on a variety of topics with the goal of demonstrating that gender issues are implicated in every area of the law.

The scholarship of this issue includes an argument for an unregulated private sperm donation market, a feminist critique of the Citizens United v. FEC decision, and an exploration of the application of Planned Parenthood v. Casey to informed consent provisions. These pieces engage the past, consider the present, and anticipate the future.

We would like to thank our brilliant and dedicated board for their hard work on this issue. In addition, we would like to thank those who are writing on topics of gender and the law and those that are advocating for women's rights. Finally, we would like to thank our readers for their continued commitment to the study women's issues in the legal arena.
