TODD LEE is a doctoral candidate and an instructor at Georgia State University in Atlanta. He is interested in the cultural dynamics of imperialism as revealed in symbolic imagery, publishing, and the imagined images of colonial peoples developed by Britons. At this time he is researching a dissertation in modern Irish history entitled "Political Culture in the Irish Free State, 1922-1937," which focuses on the use of symbol and commemoration in the state-building processes of post-colonial Ireland.

THEODORE KARASIK is completing his doctoral dissertation, "Revolution and Civil War in Arkhangel'sk, 1917-1920," in the UCLA History Department. He is a consultant to the RAND Corporation.

EDWIN TUCKER is currently a graduate student at California State University, Northridge, and expects to graduate Fall 1999. In August he will be presenting a paper at the Popular Culture Conference hosted by Bowling Green State University and held at Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, England. The paper will explore aesthetic and cultural similarities between the Fascist era and our current "Postmodern" era.

JOHN ELDEVIK is finishing up a year on a Fulbright Scholarship at the Institute für österreichische Geschichtsforschung in Vienna, Austria. His dissertation topic at UCLA under Patrick Geary is "Conflict and Resolution Over the Ecclesiastical Tithe in the Middle Ages -- 8th-12th centuries."

JEFFREY C. BLUTINGER is a doctoral candidate in history at UCLA, where he is completing his Ph.D. on "A Reception History of Heinrich Graetz" under the supervision of Professor David N. Myers.
