

UCLA

UCLA Historical Journal

Title

[Contributors]

Permalink

<https://escholarship.org/uc/item/545579ht>

Journal

UCLA Historical Journal, 20(0)

Author

Historical Journal, [No author]

Publication Date

2004

Copyright Information

Copyright 2004 by the author(s). All rights reserved unless otherwise indicated. Contact the author(s) for any necessary permissions. Learn more at <https://escholarship.org/terms>

Contributors

Ricardo Court (Ph.D. University of California, Los Angeles 2002) is Visiting Assistant Professor at Fairfield University, where he teaches courses in early modern European History and Italian Studies. He has published several articles on the social history of trust in the Mediterranean. His current book, Trusting Well, explores the tactics, strategies, language of trust, and the advent of anonymity in economic exchanges.

Fiona Deans Halloran (Ph.D. University of California, Los Angeles, 2005) is currently a Visiting Assistant Professor of American history at Bates College in Lewiston, Maine. This essay is drawn from her dissertation, "The Power of the Pencil: Thomas Nast and American Political Art." She has presented this research and other papers at conferences throughout the United States and in New Zealand.

Greg Spelman (Ph.D. Queensland University of Technology, Australia) currently works as an analyst at the Australian Department of Defence, but retains an interest in Irish diplomatic history. He has presented on aspects of Irish foreign policy at national and international conferences. His articles include: "Ireland and the European Communities: The Renewal of the Application for Accession in 1967", Melbourne Historical Journal, 2001, and "From independence to interdependence: The changing nature of Irish identity". Conference proceedings of the Conference for Social Change at QUT on 22 November 2002. He will be contributing a chapter, entitled "Ireland at the UN, 1965-1969: Evolving Policy and Fading Presence" to a book on Ireland and the United Nations for the 50th anniversary of UN membership with the Irish Department of Foreign Affairs and Institute of Public Administration.