

UCLA
Contemporary Music Score Collection

Title

Rhapsody On a Shape-Note Hymn

Permalink

<https://escholarship.org/uc/item/6ds549xj>

Author

Weber, Joseph F.

Publication Date

2020

RHAPSODY ON A SHAPE-NOTE HYMN

"IDUMEA"

(1988)

for two violins & double bass

Joseph F. Weber

CREATIVE SPIRIT

creativespiritonline.com

Santa Fe NM 87505 USA

Copyright © 2018 by Creative Spirit

All Rights Reserved

RHAPSODY ON A SHAPE-NOTE HYMN was composed by Joseph Weber in 1988. This original version for string trio has also been adapted for string orchestra (available through Creative Spirit). The basis for the work is an American hymn tune called Idumea, composed and published by Ananias Davisson (1780–1857, Virginia) and first appearing in his Kentucky Harmony (1816) with lyrics by Isaac Watts (“My God, My Life, My Love”).

Davisson was a singing school teacher, printer and compiler of shape-note tunebooks, best known for compiling and publishing Kentucky Harmony, which is generally considered the first Southern shape-note tunebook. The Idumea melody, as well as its harmony, is itself most likely based on the English ballad Lord Thomas and Fair Ellinder. In fact, many of Davisson’s “compositions” were actually re-worked versions of folksongs from England, Scotland and Ireland, which would have been familiar to the southern churchgoers, singing school teachers, and camp meeting participants for whom Davisson published his tunebooks.

Variants of Idumea are found in at least 29 tunebooks published throughout the 1800’s, and it appears that Weber’s Rhapsody actually utilizes a variant published in William Walker’s 1835 Southern Harmony, as well as Davisson’s own tenor part, published in the 1816 Kentucky Harmony. More detailed information on the southern folk hymns can be found in David W. Walker’s excellent (and comprehensive) A Selection of Shape-Note Hymns from Southern United States Tune-Books, 1816-1861 (A-R Editions, 2005). Idumea itself gained renewed recognition as part of the soundtrack for the 2003 film Cold Mountain, in which it was performed by The Sacred Harp Singers.

JOSEPH F. WEBER (born July 31, 1936, in Antioch, California; died January 21, 1999, in Santa Fe, New Mexico) was a composer, pianist, organist, and teacher. In the 1950’s and 1960’s he attended the San Francisco Conservatory of Music and San Francisco State College, studying woodwinds, organ, and composition with William O. Smith, Roger Nixon, Wendell Otey, and Raymond White, and receiving private instruction from Harry Partch in Sausalito. It was at San Francisco State College that Weber found himself within a circle of classmates, friends, and fellow composers that included Terry Riley, La Monte Young, Loren Rush, Stuart Dempster, Pauline Oliveros, Morton Subotnick, Ken Benshoof and others—a dynamic group of musical innovators that was behind the creation of the pioneering San Francisco Tape Music Center, and that gestated some of the most important developments in modern American music.

WEBER MOVED TO SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO IN 1979 and soon became active in New Mexico’s new music scene, helping to form the Composer’s Society of Santa Fe, presenting numerous organ recitals at St. Francis Auditorium (especially of the music of Messiaen), participating in the Tone Roads West Festival, and touring to Mexico City and Guanajuato as music director of the theater troupe Zona de Teatro. In 1984 he was awarded special citation by the Santa Fe Council for the Arts for contributions to new music. From 1992 until his death in 1999, he taught composition, music theory, and piano in the Contemporary Music Program at the College of Santa Fe, where he influenced dozens of young composers and musicians with his energy and enthusiasm for music and ideas. According to friends and students, he had the ability to be fiercely opinionated and inspirationally open-minded at the same time. Everyone who met him remembers him.

With so much to be done with one tone, how do we ever get from one tone to the next?

Joseph Weber, 1972, San Francisco

EDITOR’S NOTE: I became “caretaker” of Joseph Weber’s musical manuscripts, printed scores, recordings and writings soon after I took over the chairmanship of the Contemporary Music Program at the College of Santa Fe. They had been carefully organized and catalogued by his long-time collaborator, the dancer/choreographer Michele Larsson, and by composers Steve Peters and Paul Botelho. Beginning in 2018, an online archive is being created, as are performing editions of many of Weber’s 120+ compositions:

<https://joseph-weber.creativespiritonline.com>

Steven Paxton, Santa Fe, New Mexico

RHAPSODY ON A SHAPE-NOTE HYMN

Harmony and melody variant by Ananias Davisson (1816)

JOSEPH WEBER (1988)

$\text{♩} = 72 - 80$ Tense, strained, high fervor *

Violin I f

Violin II f

Contrabass f

A

B

14 2, VAR. 1—Un poco più mosso

mf

C

*Little or no vibrato throughout, slightly nasal and ruvido; use open strings whenever possible.

D

VAR. 2—Ancora un poco più mosso

28

f

32

f

E

f

39

1 2

F VAR. 3—Semplice

p

pizz.

p

G

VAR. 4 H

57

61

Do not attempt to synchronize with bass.

Free—After each player reaches and holds fermata, release together and then proceed in the same manner

Do not attempt to synchronize moving parts.

Do not attempt to synchronize with violin.

I

66 K

68

L VAR. 5—Tempo I° ♩ = 72 - 80

79 M

86