UNTITLED

Anonymous UCLA Law Student

It takes me two years to tell my mom I was raped.

I'm a country away; the phone connection is always shoddy;
this time, we're both crying.

The same thing, she tells me, a lifetime ago — to her

This pain finds mirrors everywhere and comes back magnified, grotesque, insidious, omnipresent. I don't know whose it is now.

So does strength. This, I think, is solidarity.
