ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

This issue of the Black Law Journal, the first edition sponsored by the University of Pennsylvania Law School, demonstrates the unfailing commitment of a dedicated and persevering group of black law students. Recognizing that the development of this issue is a collective process, the Student Editorial Board of the University of Pennsylvania Issue of the Black Law Journal extends its appreciation to the many persons and organizations who have assisted.

The law school administration, particularly Vice Dean Phyllis W. Beck, has our gratitude for providing essential administrative services. Carroll Sheppard and Libby Harwitz of the Alumni Office gave valuable technical assistance. We are grateful to the Black Law Students Union for their encouraging words and deeds. The Rockefeller Foundation, especially Dr. Bernard Anderson, deserves recognition for supporting the Roundtable and assisting in the dissemination of the proceedings. For their financial contributions, we thank University of Pennsylvania Law School alumni and other supporters.

Our appreciation extends to several persons for their supportive roles. We thank Eileen Bliss and Agnes Pentland for typing manuscripts with an accurate touch and keen eyes. James Dallet of the University of Pennsylvania Archives, D. Anna Fix of Joe Christensen, Inc., and the UCLA Black Law Journal Board and staff were extremely helpful. We are indebted to Cheryl Bradley-Davis, James H. Carr, Russell Endo, Constance Fain, Joy Gaines, Julio Lastra, Sue Meadows, Patricia-Anne Meier, Marguerite Miller, Cookie Otani-Smith, Dolores Peoples and Lennie Vinokur for their timely assistance.

Our profound gratitude goes to our faculty advisor, Professor Ralph R. Smith, for allowing us the benefit of his invaluable experience, for providing constructive criticism, and for giving intellectual leadership and undeniable support to this edition.
